

Jordanna Davis, MPP
Senior Advisor

Jordanna Davis is the Founder and President of the Rockingstone Group. Before launching the Rockingstone Group in 2016, Jordanna spent seven years as a Principal at the Sachs Policy Group, a boutique health policy firm in New York City. At Sachs, Jordanna consulted with New York's largest health systems, hospitals, long-term care facilities, human services agencies, unions, health plans and technology companies, helping them adapt to regulatory and market dynamics in the rapidly changing health care system.

Prior to her work in consulting, Jordanna served as the senior health policy advisor to Rhode Island Senator Sheldon Whitehouse, a key member of the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions (HELP) Committee, during the negotiations for the Affordable Care Act. In addition to work on the Affordable Care Act, she drafted legislation on health information technology, health care quality improvement, reimbursement reform, and graduate medical education. She also served as a Health Care Fellow for Wisconsin Senator Russell Feingold.

She is a Board Member of the New York eHealth Collaborative, the City of New Rochelle Industrial Development Agency, and Larchmont Temple. She is also a Mentor to the CTA Digital Health Program.

She earned her undergraduate degree at Yale College, and her master's in public policy, with a concentration in health policy, at Georgetown University. Jordanna lives in New York with her husband and two daughters.